

Amy Bailey

Amy Bailey is the Chief of the Office of Strategic Biological Planning, Advance Mitigation and Innovation in the Division of Environmental Analysis in Caltrans Headquarters. Her responsibilities at Caltrans include overseeing the Department's Fish Passage, Wildlife Connectivity, and Advance Mitigation programs and research efforts. Prior to Amy's current role, she managed the Department's Office of Biological Studies and was a Senior Wildlife Biologist and Endangered Species Coordinator in the Division of Environmental Analysis. Before her time with Caltrans Headquarters, she worked as part of Caltrans District 7 in both Los Angeles and Ventura Counties as an Environmental Planner (Natural Sciences). Amy is a Certified Planner who has experience working with regulatory agencies, city, regional, state and federal entities. She graduated from University of California at Santa Barbara with a degree in Environmental Studies and Business Economics, has a Certificate in Business from San Jose State University, Mineta Transportation Institute.